For whoever has snorkelled around reefs, one of the most striking memories is always the sheer array of colours and textures. This was not lost on Alessio Boschi who has designed a charming aquatic shoal of exotic fishes. More than anything it is the specific creation of piscine characters to match the exact shape of the baroque pearls that is interesting. Each brooch is indeed unique with different colour schemes, varied sizes and designs for the fins, and dare I say, singular facial expressions. Besides, this is a great example of how to make the most of the world of coloured gems, as when properly used they can enhance a naturalistic design like paint on canvas.
