With the bridal season in full swing, we look forward to seeing new, delightful jewellery. If the year's first jewellery fairs are any indication, shoulder duster earrings, cocktail rings, and chokers are back on the bridal scene. Of course, classic pearls and the sweetest shades of pink and pastels are ever popular, keeping brides in their most elegant and romantic mood.

Shoulder Duster Earrings

Shoulder-length earrings made up of several flexible, connected, and detachable precious elements are meant for brides to stand out on their big day. They catch the light and shimmer with every swing and sway of her head. Whether stiletto in shape or fanning out in fringes, the archetypal chandelier-inspired shoulder duster earrings are good for off-shoulder or strapless gowns for that added bridal glow.

SHOULDER DUSTER EARRINGS, COCKTAIL RINGS, AND CHOKERS ARE BACK ON THE BRIDAL SCENE

Choker

Besides being one of the most feminine pieces of jewellery, the choker is also very much a category imbued with countless cultural meanings. Whether worn high or low on the neck, a choker is always sure to be an attention grabber. For the bride on her wedding day, several rows of Akoya pearls will be both delicate and demure. A slender diamond-dotted chain could be the gift for the bridesmaids. While multiple chains are perfect for the mothers of the bride.
